corner at 10:10A. The site manager arrived early at 6:37A, and by 7:03A -- on a Saturday morning -- the big backhoe was revved up and in action. Much like yesterday, a constant flow of work but little drama. What was noticeable was the flatness of two thirds of the site. At 9:20A, let the trucking begin -- and for the rest of the day, the dump trucks came in caravans to remove the site, with both the baby backhoe and the big backhoe. The activity was the same as the last two weeks although not as frenetic as the last several work days - crew on the retaining wall. Before 7A the dump trucks were already queued on The Jurassic Giraffe (aka post hole digger/pile driver) came downstage today to give the webcam it's first good look at the happy site. At 6A the first dump truck was queued on A beautiful red and gold sunrise lead into the Ballet of the Backhoes. At 9:45A the baby backhoe took front center stage for a few minutes. Promptly at 7A the big backhoe was a work -- with all accompanying engine roar and back-up beeps -- spreading gravel on north side of the site.
